Every day, medical practices struggle with how to provide communication and other access accommodations to patients with disabilities. When not done properly, providers face lawsuits and government investigations that can cost providers hundreds of thousands of dollars in damages and legal fees, as well as significant negative publicity.

This program will:

- provide an overview of challenges that health care providers face in the area of disability access and provide real-life, workable solutions; and
- focus on mobility access, communication access, and website access.
